

Wellness reel series

From Farm to Wellness

How I Turned Educational Content into a Brand-Building Strategy for Naturally Good

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Campaign: Farm Education & Wellness Reel Series

Objective: Build trust, educate consumers, and position Naturally Good as a wellness-first organic brand through educational short-form content.

The Challenge

When I joined Naturally Good, I noticed that most organic brands were communicating in the same way—posting product images, talking about discounts, or simply highlighting that their vegetables were "100% organic."

The problem was that consumers weren't looking for vegetables; they were looking for better health, safe food for their families, and brands they could trust.

At the same time, there was a significant knowledge gap. Many people didn't know:

- How their vegetables were grown
- Why seasonal produce matters
- The difference between fresh farm produce and stored vegetables
- The nutritional benefits of everyday vegetables
- How food choices directly impact long-term health

I believed that if we could educate people instead of constantly selling to them, we could build stronger relationships and create a brand people genuinely trusted.

The Insight

People don't connect emotionally with vegetables.

They connect with:

- Better immunity
- Healthier families
- Clean eating
- Transparency
- Sustainable living

Instead of asking people to buy from Naturally Good, I wanted to give them a reason to believe in the brand first.

The Strategy

I created a recurring Farm Education & Wellness Reel Series that combined educational storytelling with authentic farm experiences.

Rather than focusing on products, every reel answered a question or solved a problem.

The content revolved around three simple themes:

Know Your Food

Helping consumers understand where their vegetables come from, how they're grown, and why farming practices matter.

Eat Better

Educating people about seasonal vegetables, nutrition, healthy habits, and the benefits of eating fresh, chemical-free produce.

See the Difference

Using real farm footage to showcase harvesting, sorting, packaging, and the journey from farm to home, making transparency a key part of the brand experience.

Content Framework

Every reel followed a simple storytelling structure that kept the content informative and engaging.

1. Hook

Capture attention within the first few seconds.

Examples:

- "Did you know spinach starts losing nutrients soon after harvest?"
- "You're eating vegetables every day—but are they actually fresh?"

2. Educate

Break down one concept into simple, easy-to-understand information using relatable language and visuals.

Topics included:

- Benefits of seasonal vegetables
- Farm-to-home freshness
- Healthy eating habits
- Vegetable nutrition
- Organic farming practices
- Food myths and facts
- Sustainable agriculture

3. Show, Don't Tell

Instead of relying on stock visuals, we filmed directly on the farm—harvesting vegetables, preparing orders, and showcasing the people behind the produce.

This made the content more authentic and trustworthy.

4. Soft Brand Integration

Rather than ending with "Buy Now," the content naturally connected the learning back to Naturally Good's mission of delivering fresh, organically grown vegetables.

My Role

I managed the campaign from ideation to execution.

This included:

- Identifying content opportunities based on customer questions
- Researching wellness and nutrition topics
- Writing scripts and storyboards
- Planning and directing farm shoots
- Coordinating with the content team
- Writing captions and SEO-friendly copy
- Publishing content across platforms
- Tracking engagement and audience response
- Continuously refining the content strategy based on performance

Marketing Principles Behind the Campaign

1. Education Before Promotion

Instead of selling products directly, we focused on sharing useful knowledge. This helped Naturally Good become a trusted source of information rather than just another organic food brand.

2. Storytelling Builds Trust

Showing real farms, real harvesting, and real people created authenticity that polished advertisements often lack.

People trust what they can see.

3. Value-First Content

Every reel was designed to teach something practical.

If viewers learned something new—even without making a purchase—the content had achieved its purpose.

This encouraged more saves, shares, and repeat engagement.

4. Emotional Marketing

We shifted the conversation from vegetables to outcomes that mattered:

- Better health
- Safer food for children
- Freshness
- Transparency
- Conscious living

People relate more to the benefits of healthy living than to the product itself.

5. Consistency Creates Authority

By consistently publishing educational content, Naturally Good strengthened its identity as a reliable voice in organic farming and wellness, making the brand more memorable over time.

Impact

The Farm Education & Wellness Reel Series helped reposition Naturally Good from a product-focused organic brand to a trusted wellness partner.

The campaign contributed to:

- Increased engagement on educational content
- Higher saves and shares due to practical, evergreen information
- Improved brand credibility through transparent farm storytelling
- Stronger audience connection with the brand's values and mission
- A growing library of reusable content for Instagram, Facebook, YouTube Shorts, WhatsApp, and the website

More importantly, it created conversations around healthy living instead of just promoting products.

Skills Demonstrated

- Brand Strategy
- Content Marketing
- Consumer Insights
- Creative Direction
- Short-Form Video Strategy
- Storytelling
- Wellness Marketing
- Farm-to-Consumer Communication
- Copywriting
- Campaign Planning
- Social Media Strategy
- Performance Analysis

Key Takeaway

Great marketing isn't about convincing people to buy vegetables—it's about helping them understand why fresh, responsibly grown food matters. By combining farm education with wellness storytelling, I transformed social media into a platform that informed, inspired, and built trust. The result was a stronger brand identity, deeper audience engagement, and a content strategy that supported long-term business growth.

Lifecycle flows

Designing Lifecycle Marketing Across Two Different Business Models

Building Customer Journeys for a Café Brand (HIOC) and a Subscription-Based Organic Brand (Naturally Good)

Overview

Brands:

- HIOC – QSR & Café Brand
- Naturally Good Organic Farms – Subscription-based Organic Farm-to-Home Brand

Objective:

Create personalized lifecycle journeys that improved customer experience, increased repeat purchases, strengthened customer retention, and built long-term brand loyalty across two completely different business models.

The Challenge

Although both brands operated in the food industry, their customer journeys were completely different.

HIOC

Customers made quick purchase decisions—walking into the café, ordering online, or discovering the brand through social media. The challenge was encouraging repeat visits and increasing customer lifetime value.

Naturally Good

Customers didn't make impulse purchases. They required education, trust, and reassurance before subscribing to weekly organic vegetable deliveries. The challenge was building confidence, reducing drop-offs, and improving subscription retention.

Rather than applying one marketing strategy to both businesses, I designed separate lifecycle journeys tailored to how customers interacted with each brand.

My Approach

I started by mapping every customer touchpoint—from first discovery to becoming a loyal customer.

For both brands, I identified:

- Entry points
- Customer motivations
- Common drop-off stages
- Pain points
- Communication opportunities
- Retention triggers

This became the foundation for each lifecycle flow.

HIOC – Café Customer Lifecycle

Awareness

Customers discovered HIOC through:

- Instagram & Facebook
- Influencer collaborations
- Google Maps
- Food delivery platforms
- Café events
- Local marketing

First Visit

The objective was to create a memorable first experience through:

- Café ambience
- Brand storytelling
- Menu recommendations
- Staff interactions
- Healthy food positioning

Post-Purchase Engagement

After the visit, communication focused on:

- Thank-you messages
- Customer reviews and feedback
- Highlighting other menu categories
- Seasonal specials
- New product launches
- Limited-time café offers

Repeat Purchase Campaigns

To encourage repeat visits, I planned:

- Weekend campaigns
- Festive menus
- Limited-time offers
- Combo promotions
- Loyalty-focused communication
- Event invitations

Reactivation

For inactive customers, campaigns included:

- "We've Missed You" offers
- New menu launches
- Festival promotions

- Personalized discounts
- Exclusive café experiences

The goal was to bring customers back without relying solely on discounts.

Naturally Good – Subscription Lifecycle

Unlike a café, Naturally Good required a much longer decision-making journey.

Awareness

Customers entered through:

- Meta Ads
- Google Ads
- Website
- Hyperlocal campaigns
- Society activations
- Farm events
- Organic content
- Referrals

Lead Nurturing

I designed educational communication around:

- Why organic matters
- Farm-to-home process
- Seasonal vegetables
- Customer testimonials
- Wellness education
- Subscription benefits

The focus was on building trust before asking for a commitment.

Conversion

Lifecycle communication supported:

- Trial bag campaigns
- App downloads
- Subscription reminders
- Cart abandonment
- Offer campaigns
- WhatsApp follow-ups
- Sales team coordination

Customer Onboarding

After subscription, customers received communication explaining:

- Weekly delivery process
- Managing subscriptions
- Choosing vegetables
- Storage tips
- Customer support
- Farm transparency

Engagement

To maintain relationships, I planned content around:

- Wellness education
- Recipes
- Seasonal eating
- Farm updates
- Product launches
- Community events

- Health tips

Retention

Retention campaigns focused on:

- Subscription renewals
- Win-back campaigns
- Referral programs
- Member-exclusive offers
- Cross-selling Naturally Pure products
- Personalized recommendations

Channels Used

Across both brands, lifecycle communication was delivered through:

- WhatsApp
- Email
- SMS
- Push Notifications
- CRM Campaigns
- Social Media
- Website
- In-app Communication
- Customer Support Touchpoints

My Responsibilities

I independently managed the lifecycle strategy by:

- Mapping customer journeys
- Identifying lifecycle stages
- Segmenting audiences
- Planning communication flows
- Writing customer communication
- Creating WhatsApp and email journeys
- Planning push notification strategies
- Aligning campaigns with marketing calendars
- Coordinating with sales, operations, and design teams
- Continuously optimizing flows based on customer behaviour

Customer Journey Mapping

Understanding every interaction helped identify opportunities to improve the customer experience.

Personalization

Different customer segments received relevant communication based on where they were in the lifecycle instead of receiving generic promotional messages.

Relationship Marketing

The objective wasn't just to acquire customers but to build long-term relationships through consistent value and meaningful communication.

Lifecycle Automation

Automated journeys ensured timely communication while maintaining consistency across multiple customer touchpoints.

Retention-Focused Growth

Instead of relying only on acquiring new customers, the strategy emphasized increasing customer lifetime value through repeat purchases, subscriptions, and loyalty.

Business Impact

Implementing structured lifecycle journeys created a more organized and customer-centric marketing approach across both brands.

The initiative contributed to:

- Improved customer engagement through relevant and timely communication
- Better onboarding experiences for new customers
- Stronger repeat purchase opportunities for HIOC
- Improved subscription nurturing and retention for Naturally Good
- More consistent brand communication across channels
- Scalable lifecycle frameworks that could evolve with future campaigns and business growth

Skills Demonstrated

- Lifecycle Marketing
- CRM Strategy
- Customer Journey Mapping
- Marketing Automation
- Customer Segmentation
- WhatsApp & Email Marketing
- Retention Strategy
- Loyalty Marketing
- Conversion Optimization
- Copywriting
- Campaign Planning
- Cross-Functional Collaboration
- Customer Experience (CX)

Key Takeaway

One of the biggest lessons from this project was that lifecycle marketing is never one-size-fits-all. A café customer and a subscription customer behave differently, and their communication journeys should reflect that. By designing tailored lifecycle strategies for HIOC and Naturally Good, I created customer experiences that prioritized relevance, trust, and long-term engagement over one-time transactions.

Lift Media

Owning the Daily Commute

How I Used Lift Media to Build Hyperlocal Brand Visibility Across Premium Societies in Gurgaon

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Campaign: Hyperlocal Lift Media Campaign

Objective: Increase brand awareness, improve local visibility, and generate high-intent leads by placing Naturally Good directly in front of its target audience.

The Challenge

Naturally Good caters to a very specific audience—health-conscious families living in premium residential societies.

Traditional digital advertising helped us reach people online, but it didn't always create a strong local presence or trust within the communities we wanted to serve.

The challenge was simple:

How do we make Naturally Good a familiar name before customers even think about buying organic vegetables?

We needed a marketing channel that reached residents repeatedly, in a space where they weren't distracted by endless scrolling or competing advertisements.

The Insight

One thing stood out during our customer research—our ideal customers spend time in apartment lifts every single day.

Whether they were leaving for work, returning home, or heading out for errands, the lift offered a few uninterrupted seconds of attention.

Instead of competing for attention online, we decided to own this everyday moment.

The Strategy

I planned and executed a large-scale lift media campaign across premium residential societies in Gurgaon.

The objective wasn't just visibility—it was consistent brand recall.

By placing Naturally Good inside residential lifts, we ensured that residents saw the brand multiple times every day, gradually building familiarity and trust.

The campaign focused on premium communities that closely matched our target audience, allowing us to reach families with a higher likelihood of subscribing to our farm-to-home service.

My Role

I managed the campaign from planning to on-ground execution.

My responsibilities included:

- Identifying premium residential societies aligned with our target audience
- Coordinating with lift media vendors and society management teams
- Planning campaign timelines and installation schedules
- Designing and reviewing creative communication for the posters
- Ensuring consistent branding across all locations
- Monitoring installation quality and placement
- Conducting regular follow-ups and audits to ensure posters remained visible throughout the campaign

One of the biggest milestones of this project was successfully overseeing the installation of more than 500 lift posters across premium residential societies in Gurgaon.

Managing a campaign of this scale required careful coordination between multiple stakeholders while maintaining consistency in execution.

Creative Approach

Since residents only spend a few seconds inside a lift, every poster had to communicate its message instantly.

The creatives focused on:

- Fresh, farm-to-home organic vegetables
 - Simple and benefit-led messaging
 - Strong visual hierarchy
 - QR codes for quick action
 - Clear calls-to-action encouraging app downloads and inquiries
- Rather than overwhelming viewers with information, the communication was designed to spark curiosity and make Naturally Good memorable.

Hyperlocal Marketing

Instead of targeting a broad audience, the campaign focused on neighborhoods where our ideal customers lived.

This improved relevance and reduced wasted impressions.

High-Frequency Brand Exposure

Marketing research shows that repeated exposure builds familiarity and trust.

Residents encountered Naturally Good several times a day, reinforcing brand recall without feeling intrusive.

Contextual Advertising

The campaign placed the brand in an environment where consumers had a few uninterrupted moments to absorb the message, increasing the likelihood of recall.

Offline Meets Online

Each poster acted as a bridge between offline awareness and digital engagement through QR codes and direct response mechanisms, making it easy for interested residents to learn more or take action.

Business Impact

The lift media campaign significantly strengthened Naturally Good's visibility within its core markets.

Key outcomes included:

- Established a strong hyperlocal presence across premium residential communities
- Increased brand recall through repeated daily exposure
- Improved awareness among high-intent households
- Supported lead generation efforts by driving residents to digital channels
- Strengthened trust by creating a visible presence within the communities we served
- Complemented digital marketing efforts with a scalable offline awareness strategy

Beyond impressions, the campaign helped Naturally Good become a recognizable brand in the very neighborhoods where our customers lived.

Skills Demonstrated

- Hyperlocal Marketing
- Offline Brand Strategy
- ATL & BTL Campaign Management
- Media Planning
- Vendor Management
- Project Management
- Campaign Execution
- Brand Communication
- Creative Coordination
- Stakeholder Management
- Operations & Logistics
- Cross-Functional Collaboration

Key Takeaway

Great marketing isn't always about reaching more people—it's about reaching the right people, consistently. By installing over 500 lift posters across premium societies in Gurgaon, I transformed everyday residential spaces into high-impact brand touchpoints.

The campaign strengthened Naturally Good's local presence, improved brand recall among our target audience, and demonstrated how thoughtfully executed offline media can work hand in hand with digital marketing to drive awareness and long-term growth.

Apartment Activations

Closing the Loop with 360° Hyperlocal Marketing How I Combined Lift Media, Apartment Activations, and Door-to-Door Sampling to Create a High-Impact Community Campaign

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Campaign: 360° Hyperlocal Society Activation

Objective: Create multiple brand touchpoints within premium residential societies to increase awareness, generate qualified leads, and drive subscriptions through an integrated offline marketing strategy.

The Challenge

Our target audience was clear—health-conscious families living in premium residential societies across Gurgaon.

While our lift media campaign successfully increased brand visibility, awareness alone wasn't enough. Many residents noticed the brand but still had questions:

- What makes Naturally Good different?
- Are the vegetables really organic?
- How does the subscription work?
- Can I try the products before committing?

We realized that people needed more than an advertisement—they needed a real interaction with the brand.

The Insight

Trust is one of the biggest barriers when selling fresh food and subscriptions.

People are far more likely to subscribe when they can:

- Speak to someone face-to-face
- Experience the product firsthand
- Taste the quality
- Ask questions
- Understand the story behind the brand

This led to the idea of building a complete hyperlocal ecosystem instead of relying on a single marketing channel.

The Strategy

Rather than running isolated campaigns, I designed a 360° hyperlocal marketing approach where every activity reinforced the next.

The journey looked like this:

Lift Media → Apartment Activation → Door-to-Door Sampling → Lead Generation → Sales Follow-up → Subscription Conversion

Residents first became familiar with Naturally Good through lift posters. When they later saw our activation stall or received a sample at their doorstep, the brand already felt recognizable and trustworthy.

Each touchpoint built on the previous one, reducing hesitation and increasing the likelihood of meaningful conversations.

Phase 1: Building Awareness

The campaign began with strategically placed lift posters across premium residential societies. These creatives introduced Naturally Good's farm-to-home model, highlighted our core value proposition, and created repeated daily visibility among residents. This ensured the brand was already familiar before any on-ground interaction took place.

Phase 2: Apartment Activations

I planned and executed on-ground activations inside the same residential societies. Residents were invited to interact directly with the brand through:

- Product displays
- Fresh vegetable showcases
- Sampling experiences
- Conversations around organic farming
- Subscription education
- Wellness-focused discussions
- Live demonstrations of our farm-to-home model

The activations transformed a simple advertisement into a real brand experience.

Instead of selling aggressively, the focus was on educating families and answering their questions.

Phase 3: Door-to-Door Sampling

To maximize reach, we extended the campaign beyond the activation stalls through targeted door-to-door sampling.

Our team visited homes within the same societies to:

- Introduce Naturally Good personally
- Distribute fresh product samples
- Explain subscription plans
- Share brochures and offers
- Collect interested leads
- Schedule follow-ups for the sales team

This personalized approach allowed us to engage residents who couldn't attend the activation but were already familiar with the brand through lift media.

My Role

I managed the campaign end-to-end, ensuring every touchpoint worked together seamlessly.

My responsibilities included:

- Identifying target societies
- Planning the hyperlocal campaign strategy
- Coordinating lift media, apartment activations, and sampling activities
- Managing vendors and on-ground teams
- Creating marketing collateral
- Planning activation layouts
- Training promoters on brand communication
- Designing lead collection processes
- Coordinating with the sales team for timely follow-ups
- Monitoring campaign execution and optimizing operations

One of my key responsibilities was ensuring that every offline activity supported the overall customer journey rather than functioning as an isolated marketing effort.

Marketing Principles Applied

Integrated Marketing Communications (IMC)

Every touchpoint communicated a consistent brand message, creating a seamless customer experience from awareness to conversion.

The Rule of Multiple Touchpoints

Customers rarely make decisions after seeing a brand only once.

By combining lift media, apartment activations, and door-to-door engagement, we created repeated exposure that increased familiarity and trust.

Experiential Marketing

Allowing customers to interact with the brand, ask questions, and experience product quality firsthand made the campaign far more persuasive than traditional advertising alone.

Hyperlocal Marketing

Instead of targeting the entire city, we focused our efforts on premium residential communities where our ideal customers lived.

This made the campaign highly relevant and operationally efficient.

Sampling as a Conversion Tool

Food is best experienced, not explained.

Product sampling reduced uncertainty, encouraged trial, and helped potential customers experience the freshness and quality that Naturally Good promised.

Business Impact

The integrated campaign created a stronger and more memorable presence within our target communities.

Key outcomes included:

- Increased brand visibility through repeated local exposure
- Higher resident engagement during apartment activations
- Improved trust through face-to-face conversations
- More qualified lead generation from targeted societies
- Better coordination between marketing and sales teams
- Stronger subscription opportunities through product trials and personalized interactions
- A scalable hyperlocal marketing model that could be replicated across multiple residential communities

Most importantly, the campaign demonstrated how combining awareness, experience, and direct engagement can create a much stronger customer journey than relying on a single marketing channel.

Skills Demonstrated

- Hyperlocal Marketing Strategy
- Integrated Marketing Campaigns (360°)
- Apartment & Community Activations
- Experiential Marketing
- Sampling Strategy
- Lead Generation
- Consumer Engagement
- Event Planning & Execution
- Vendor & Team Management
- Cross-Functional Collaboration
- Offline-to-Online Customer Journey Design
- Brand Communication

- Project Management

Key Takeaway

The success of hyperlocal marketing doesn't come from a single advertisement—it comes from creating a connected customer journey. By combining lift media, apartment activations, and door-to-door sampling within the same residential societies, I built a 360° campaign that moved residents from awareness to trust, from product trial to meaningful conversations, and ultimately from curiosity to subscription. This integrated approach showed how strategic offline marketing can become a powerful engine for customer acquisition and long-term brand growth.

Festival campaigns

Festival Events & Community Experiences

A major part of our festive marketing strategy was participating in and organizing community events across premium residential societies and at our farm.

Instead of limiting our campaigns to social media, we took Naturally Good directly to our customers through interactive experiences that encouraged conversations, product discovery, and community participation.

Each event was designed to educate, engage, and create meaningful brand interactions rather than simply promote products.

Some of the key initiatives included:

Baisakhi Celebrations

- Apartment society activations
- Traditional-themed branding
- Fresh vegetable sampling
- Community engagement activities
- Lead generation and subscription awareness

Navratri & Festive Wellness Events

- Healthy festive food awareness
- Product displays and sampling
- Wellness conversations around fasting-friendly foods
- Family engagement activities
- Brand experience zones

Christmas Farm Event

To celebrate Christmas and the Naturally Good anniversary, we transformed our farm into an experience destination where customers could spend quality time with their families.

The event included:

- Guided farm tours
- Harvest experiences
- Live music and entertainment
- Games and activities for children
- Community lunch
- Product showcases
- Wellness conversations
- Farm storytelling

Rather than promoting products, the focus was on helping customers experience the Naturally Good ecosystem firsthand.

Farm Experience Days

Throughout the year, we organized farm events that allowed subscribers and prospective customers to:

- Walk through our farms
- Learn about organic farming
- Harvest vegetables themselves
- Understand our farm-to-home model
- Participate in interactive wellness sessions
- Connect directly with the brand team

These experiences significantly strengthened trust by giving customers complete transparency into where their food came from.

Customer Delight Initiatives

Alongside events, we introduced thoughtful festive gestures that enhanced the customer experience.

One of the most appreciated initiatives was our Diwali Customer Delight Campaign, where every subscriber received a complimentary flower with their weekly vegetable delivery.

This wasn't positioned as a promotional giveaway but as a heartfelt gesture of gratitude, transforming a regular delivery into a memorable festive experience.

Small moments like these helped reinforce Naturally Good's premium, customer-first positioning and created emotional connections that extended beyond the product itself.

My Role

I was responsible for planning and executing these campaigns end-to-end, including:

- Developing festival campaign concepts
- Creating integrated online and offline marketing plans
- Coordinating with RWAs, society management teams, and event partners
- Planning activation layouts and customer journeys
- Managing branding, creative assets, and event collateral
- Coordinating product sampling and experiential zones
- Training promoters and event staff
- Overseeing logistics, vendor management, and execution
- Collecting leads and ensuring smooth handover to the sales team
- Measuring campaign effectiveness and identifying improvements for future activations

Marketing Principles Applied

- Experiential Marketing: Giving customers an opportunity to experience the brand rather than simply hear about it.
- Community Marketing: Building relationships within residential societies and creating a sense of belonging.
- Integrated Marketing Communications (IMC): Connecting social media, on-ground activations, events, and customer communication into one cohesive campaign.
- Relationship Marketing: Strengthening long-term customer loyalty through meaningful interactions rather than transactional promotions.
- Customer Delight: Creating memorable moments—such as festive gifts and immersive farm experiences—that encouraged advocacy and positive word-of-mouth.
- Hyperlocal Marketing: Focusing efforts where our target audience lived, making every activation highly relevant and impactful.

Key Takeaway

"Festivals were more than marketing opportunities—they were opportunities to build relationships. By combining digital campaigns, apartment activations, farm events, festive community celebrations, product sampling, and customer delight initiatives, I helped Naturally Good become part of our customers' celebrations rather than just another brand communicating during the festive season. This integrated approach strengthened brand visibility, built trust, generated qualified leads, and created lasting customer experiences."

Ghee& Honey Packaging

Packaging Innovation

Designing Packaging That Added Value Beyond the Product

While developing the packaging for Naturally Good's Pure Raw Honey and A2 Bilona Cow Ghee, I wanted the customer experience to begin the moment they opened the package. Instead of treating the packaging as just a container, I looked for small improvements that could make the products more convenient and enjoyable to use every day.

The Challenge

Premium food products are often differentiated through ingredients and branding, but many brands overlook what happens after the customer receives the product.

I asked a simple question:

"How can the packaging continue to serve the customer even after the purchase?"

The goal was to make the experience feel thoughtful, practical, and premium without adding unnecessary complexity.

The Solution

Honey – Complimentary Wooden Honey Dipper

One common challenge with honey is pouring or serving it without creating a mess.

To solve this, I introduced a complimentary wooden honey dipper inside every honey package.

This small addition allowed customers to:

- Drizzle honey neatly
- Improve serving convenience
- Reduce product wastage
- Enhance the overall premium experience
- Use the product exactly as intended

Beyond functionality, the wooden dipper complemented the natural and artisanal positioning of the brand, making the packaging feel more complete and gift-worthy.

A2 Bilona Cow Ghee – Wooden Spoon

For the A2 Bilona Cow Ghee range, I introduced a premium wooden spoon with every jar. Customers often use regular kitchen spoons, which may be wet or unsuitable for repeatedly handling ghee.

Including a dedicated wooden spoon helped:

- Make serving more hygienic
- Improve everyday convenience
- Reinforce the premium positioning
- Encourage customers to use the product with a dedicated utensil
- Create a more thoughtful unboxing experience

It transformed a simple purchase into a more complete product experience.

My Role

I was responsible for identifying these customer experience opportunities and integrating them into the packaging strategy.

My involvement included:

- Understanding customer usage behaviour
- Identifying pain points after purchase
- Researching suitable accessories
- Evaluating material options
- Coordinating sourcing and vendor discussions
- Ensuring the accessories complemented the packaging design
- Aligning the additions with the brand's premium positioning

Marketing Principles Applied

Customer-Centric Design

The packaging was designed around how customers actually use the product, making everyday interactions easier and more enjoyable.

Value-Added Packaging

Instead of competing only on price, the product delivered additional value through useful accessories that enhanced the overall experience.

Experience Marketing

The unboxing experience became part of the brand story.

Customers didn't just receive honey or ghee—they received thoughtfully designed products that reflected Naturally Good's attention to detail.

Premium Positioning

Small details often shape perceptions of quality.

The wooden dipper and spoon elevated the products, helping justify their premium positioning while creating a memorable first impression.

Brand Differentiation

These additions created a clear point of difference from competing products that offered similar ingredients but overlooked the customer experience.

Business Impact

These packaging enhancements helped Naturally Good strengthen its premium positioning by making the products more functional and memorable.

The initiative contributed to:

- A more enjoyable unboxing experience
- Increased perceived product value
- Stronger premium brand perception
- Better product usability in everyday life
- Higher customer satisfaction through thoughtful design
- Improved differentiation in a competitive category

Most importantly, these were not expensive additions—they were meaningful ones. A simple wooden honey dipper and a dedicated ghee spoon transformed the products from everyday pantry items into thoughtfully designed experiences.

Key Takeaway

Great packaging doesn't end when the customer opens the box—it continues every time they use the product. By introducing a complimentary wooden honey dipper with our Pure Raw Honey and a dedicated wooden spoon with our A2 Bilona Cow Ghee, I transformed functional packaging into a customer experience. These small but intentional innovations improved usability, reinforced our premium positioning, and demonstrated that thoughtful design can create lasting brand value without increasing complexity.

Website & Landing page

Building a Premium Digital Brand Through Storytelling Creating the Complete Website Content & Landing Page Strategy for Naturally Good

Website: Naturally Good

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Project: Website Content Strategy, UX Copywriting & Landing Pages

Objective:

Transform Naturally Good's website into a premium digital experience that educated visitors, built trust, reflected the brand's values, and converted visitors into subscribers.

The Challenge

Naturally Good wasn't just selling vegetables.

We were introducing a completely different way of consuming food—one built around organic farming, seasonal eating, wellness, sustainability, and subscriptions.

That meant the website couldn't function like a traditional e-commerce platform.

It had to answer one important question:

"Why should someone completely change the way they buy vegetables?"

Instead of simply listing products, the website needed to educate, inspire confidence, and communicate the brand's philosophy before asking customers to subscribe.

The Insight

People don't subscribe to Naturally Good because they need vegetables.

They subscribe because they want:

- Healthier families
- Freshly harvested food
- Transparency
- Sustainable living
- Trust in where their food comes from

The website needed to communicate emotions before features.

Every page had to feel like a conversation—not a sales brochure.

The Strategy

I developed the complete content strategy for the website by mapping the customer journey from discovery to conversion.

Rather than writing isolated website copy, I built a storytelling structure where every page answered a different customer question.

Instead of saying:

"We sell organic vegetables."

The website gradually explained:

- Why organic matters
- Why seasonal food is healthier
- Why our farming practices are different
- Why subscriptions create a better lifestyle
- Why customers should trust Naturally Good

This approach transformed the website into a digital brand experience rather than just an online storefront.

My Role

I led the content creation process from concept to execution.

My responsibilities included:

- Developing the complete website content strategy
- Creating the brand voice and messaging framework
- Writing homepage copy
- Writing all landing pages
- Developing the brand story
- Creating the Farm-to-Home journey content
- Writing subscription plan descriptions
- Developing product copy for Naturally Pure products
- Writing wellness-focused content
- Creating FAQ content
- Writing call-to-actions throughout the website
- Structuring page hierarchy for better readability
- Working closely with designers and developers to ensure the content complemented the user experience

Pages I Created

Rather than writing generic website copy, each page was designed with a clear objective.

Home

The homepage introduced Naturally Good as a premium organic lifestyle brand—not just a vegetable delivery service.

It highlighted:

- Subscription model
- Farm-to-home process
- Premium offerings
- Wellness plans
- Customer journey
- Clear calls to action

About Us

Instead of a corporate history, I wrote a story around Naturally Good's purpose, mission, farming philosophy, and long-term vision to create an emotional connection with visitors.

Nature

This page focused on sustainability, explaining topics such as soil regeneration, water conservation, crop diversity, zero-chemical farming, carbon reduction, and our controlled supply chain. The goal was to educate customers on the environmental impact of choosing Naturally Good.

Farmers

I created content that highlighted the people behind the produce, showcasing our farming community and reinforcing transparency, trust, and the farm-to-table philosophy.

You

Rather than talking about products, this page focused entirely on the customer.

I developed content around:

- Children
- Women
- Men

- Senior citizens
- Working professionals
- Community wellness
- Healthy lifestyles

This shifted the conversation from vegetables to the health benefits customers could experience.

Subscription Plans

Instead of presenting prices alone, I positioned each plan around the value customers would receive, including wellness advisors, recipe support, farm visits, and premium products, helping customers understand the complete membership experience.

Landing Pages

I developed dedicated landing pages for campaigns, lead-generation initiatives, and marketing promotions.

Each page followed a conversion-focused structure:

- Clear headline
- Customer problem
- Brand solution
- Trust-building information
- Benefits
- Strong call-to-action

FAQs

I created detailed FAQs covering subscriptions, deliveries, customization, and customer support to reduce purchase hesitation and improve the overall user experience.

My Content Philosophy

Every page followed one simple framework:

Educate → Build Trust → Inspire Action

Instead of using aggressive sales messaging, I focused on helping visitors understand why Naturally Good existed and how it could improve their lifestyle.

The goal was to make customers feel informed before asking them to subscribe.

Storytelling Before Selling

People connect with stories, not specifications.

The website communicated Naturally Good's purpose before discussing products.

Customer-Centric Copywriting

Every section was written from the customer's perspective, addressing their concerns, motivations, and aspirations instead of focusing solely on the brand.

Premium Brand Positioning

The language was intentionally clean, minimal, and confident to reflect Naturally Good's premium identity and differentiate it from discount-driven grocery brands.

Content-Led Conversion

Rather than relying on hard-selling tactics, each page built confidence through education, transparency, and clear value, guiding visitors naturally toward subscribing.

Consistency Across Touchpoints

The same tone of voice, messaging, and visual storytelling was maintained across the website, landing pages, social media campaigns, advertisements, and marketing collateral, creating a unified brand experience.

Business Impact

The project transformed Naturally Good's website into a digital extension of the brand.

It helped:

- Establish a premium and trustworthy online presence
- Clearly communicate the subscription model
- Strengthen the brand story and farm-to-home narrative
- Improve customer understanding of products and services
- Support marketing campaigns with high-converting landing pages
- Create a consistent brand voice across all digital touchpoints
- Build a scalable content foundation for future campaigns and product launches

Skills Demonstrated

- Brand Strategy
- Website Content Strategy
- UX Writing
- Conversion Copywriting
- Landing Page Development
- Brand Storytelling
- Information Architecture
- Customer Journey Mapping
- SEO Content Writing
- Product Marketing
- Digital Brand Building
- Cross-Functional Collaboration

Key Takeaway

A premium brand is built as much through words as it is through design. By developing the complete content strategy for Naturally Good's website and landing pages, I transformed the platform into a digital brand experience that educated customers, built trust, and reflected the company's purpose. Every page was designed to move visitors from curiosity to confidence, creating a website that didn't just showcase products—it communicated a lifestyle centered on health, transparency, and sustainable living.

Performance creative

Creative That Converts

Developing High-Performance Meta Creatives Across Three Food & Beverage Brands

Overview

Brands:

- Naturally Good Organic Farms – Premium Organic Subscription Brand
- HIOC – Café & QSR Chain (Agra)
- Cupeese – Premium Cheesecake Brand (Agra)

Objective

Develop performance-driven Meta creatives that increased brand awareness, generated qualified leads, drove website visits, increased store footfall, boosted online orders, and supported customer acquisition while maintaining each brand's unique identity.

The Challenge

Although all three brands belonged to the food and beverage industry, they catered to completely different customer needs.

At Naturally Good, customers invested in long-term health through subscriptions.

At HIOC, purchasing decisions were spontaneous and driven by cravings, convenience, and dining experiences.

At Cupeese, customers were looking for indulgence, celebrations, gifting, and premium desserts.

Creating one creative strategy for all three brands wasn't possible.

Every campaign had to reflect how customers thought, what motivated them, and how they made purchasing decisions.

The Insight

The biggest learning from working across multiple brands was simple:

People don't buy products—they buy emotions, experiences, and outcomes.

The creative strategy needed to change based on customer intent.

For Naturally Good, trust was the biggest driver.

For HIOC, appetite and instant gratification influenced decisions.

For Cupeese, visual appeal and emotional occasions such as birthdays, celebrations, and gifting played the biggest role.

This understanding became the foundation of every campaign.

The Strategy

Instead of creating advertisements around products, I built creative frameworks around customer psychology.

Every campaign answered three questions:

- Who is the audience?
- What motivates them to take action?
- What visual and message will stop them from scrolling?

This allowed every advertisement to feel relevant, authentic, and performance-oriented.

Brand 01 — Naturally Good Organic Farms

Primary Objectives

- Generate subscriptions
- Increase app downloads
- Drive website traffic
- Generate qualified leads
- Build brand awareness

Creative Direction

The communication focused on healthy living rather than vegetables.

Creative themes included:

- Farm-to-home freshness
- Chemical-free produce
- Seasonal eating
- Family wellness
- Organic farming
- Customer trust
- Subscription convenience

Visual storytelling featured:

- Fresh harvests
- Farms

- Families
- Wellness lifestyle
- Product packaging
- Farm experiences

Brand 02 — HIOC Café & QSR

Primary Objectives

- Increase café footfall
- Drive online food orders
- Promote new menu launches
- Increase repeat customers
- Build local brand awareness

Creative Direction

For HIOC, food became the hero.

The advertisements focused on:

- Freshly prepared meals
- Healthy café offerings
- Signature beverages
- Limited-time menus
- Combo meals
- Café ambience
- Seasonal specials

The messaging was short, energetic, and action-driven, encouraging immediate decisions.

Visuals highlighted rich food photography, vibrant café experiences, and inviting dining moments.

Brand 03 — Cupeese Premium Cheesecake

Primary Objectives

- Increase cake orders
- Promote celebration cakes
- Drive festive and gifting sales
- Build premium brand positioning
- Increase local awareness in Agra

Creative Direction

Cheesecake is an emotional purchase.

Rather than focusing on ingredients, the creatives celebrated moments.

Campaign themes included:

- Birthdays
- Anniversaries
- Festive gifting
- Luxury desserts
- Weekend indulgence
- Celebration moments
- Premium craftsmanship

The visual language was elegant, minimal, and premium, allowing the desserts to become the centerpiece of every advertisement.

High-quality photography, close-up product shots, and luxurious styling reinforced Cupeese's premium positioning.

My Creative Process

Every Meta creative followed a structured performance framework.

Understanding Customer Behaviour

Before creating any campaign, I researched:

- Audience demographics

- Purchase intent
- Customer pain points
- Motivations
- Seasonal behaviour
- Buying triggers

Scroll-Stopping Visuals

Since attention spans are short, every creative was designed to capture interest within the first few seconds.

Depending on the campaign, this included:

- Lifestyle imagery
- Product close-ups
- Farm visuals
- Café photography
- Dessert styling
- Reels
- Motion graphics
- Customer-focused storytelling

Benefit-Driven Copywriting

Instead of describing products, the copy focused on customer outcomes.

Examples included:

Naturally Good

"Freshly harvested vegetables delivered directly from our farms."

"Healthy food made fresh, served with flavour."

Cupeese

"Every celebration deserves a cheesecake worth remembering."

Continuous Creative Testing

For every campaign, I created multiple variations by experimenting with:

- Headlines
- Hooks
- Primary copy
- Visual hierarchy
- Static vs Video
- Carousel vs Single Image
- Lifestyle vs Product imagery
- CTA placement
- Promotional messaging

The objective was to continuously improve creative performance through testing and learning.

My Responsibilities

I led the complete creative process across all three brands.

This included:

- Campaign planning
- Creative strategy
- Audience research
- Consumer insight mapping
- Copywriting
- Creative direction
- Design briefing
- Video planning
- Reviewing creatives
- Coordinating with designers and editors
- Maintaining brand consistency

- Developing campaign variations
- Supporting Meta campaign optimization through creative improvements

Consumer Psychology

Understanding why customers buy was the foundation of every campaign. Different customer motivations required different creative strategies.

Creative-Led Performance Marketing

Strong creatives are the biggest driver of successful Meta campaigns. The focus remained on developing advertisements that naturally captured attention and encouraged action.

Platform-First Design

Every creative was optimized for Meta's mobile-first environment using bold visuals, concise messaging, and engaging storytelling.

A/B Testing & Optimization

Creative performance was continuously improved through testing different messaging, visuals, and formats to identify what resonated best with each audience.

Brand Consistency

Although every brand had its own personality, all creatives maintained a cohesive visual identity and tone that strengthened long-term brand recognition.

Business Impact

Managing creative strategy across three brands gave me the opportunity to build performance campaigns tailored to different customer journeys and business objectives.

This approach helped:

- Build stronger brand awareness across local and regional audiences
- Support customer acquisition through targeted Meta campaigns
- Increase engagement with audience-specific messaging
- Create scalable creative systems for future campaigns
- Strengthen collaboration between marketing, design, and performance teams
- Establish consistent premium branding across all advertising assets

Skills Demonstrated

- Meta Performance Marketing
- Creative Strategy
- Consumer Psychology
- Performance Copywriting
- Creative Direction
- Growth Marketing
- Visual Storytelling
- A/B Testing
- Campaign Planning
- Brand Positioning
- Cross-Industry Marketing
- Digital Advertising
- Marketing Analytics

Key Takeaway

Working across Naturally Good, HIOC, and Cupeese taught me that great performance marketing isn't about creating beautiful ads—it's about understanding human behaviour. Whether encouraging a family to subscribe to organic vegetables, inviting customers to visit a café, or helping someone celebrate with a premium cheesecake, I developed creative strategies that aligned with each audience's motivations. By combining storytelling, consumer psychology, and continuous testing, I created Meta campaigns that balanced brand building with measurable business growth.

Farm to Family Events

Transforming Our Farm into a Brand Experience That Built Trust, Community & Customer Loyalty

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Campaign: Farm to Family Events

Objective: Strengthen customer trust and brand loyalty by inviting families to experience Naturally Good's farms firsthand, creating meaningful interactions that went beyond traditional marketing.

The Challenge

For most consumers, organic farming is something they hear about—but rarely experience. While digital campaigns and product messaging could explain our farming practices, they couldn't fully answer questions like:

- Are the vegetables really grown organically?
- Where does my food come from?
- Can I trust the quality?
- What makes Naturally Good different from other brands?

We realized that trust couldn't always be built through advertisements. Sometimes, the best marketing is simply opening your doors and letting customers experience the brand for themselves.

The Insight

People trust what they can see.

Instead of telling customers about our farms, we decided to invite them to become part of the journey.

The idea behind Farm to Family was simple—bring families to the farm, let them meet the people behind their food, experience the harvesting process, and understand what truly goes into growing fresh, chemical-free produce.

By creating memorable experiences instead of sales pitches, we could build stronger emotional connections with our customers.

The Strategy

I conceptualized and executed Farm to Family as a recurring experiential marketing initiative.

The objective wasn't to organise a farm visit—it was to create a complete brand experience where education, wellness, community, and entertainment came together.

Each event was designed to help visitors experience Naturally Good's philosophy through hands-on activities and meaningful interactions.

Event Experience

Every Farm to Family event followed a carefully planned customer journey.

Welcome Experience

Guests were welcomed at the farm and introduced to the Naturally Good story, our farming philosophy, and the purpose behind the event.

Guided Farm Walks

Families explored different sections of the farm while learning about:

- Organic farming methods
- Seasonal crops
- Soil health
- Natural pest management
- Sustainable agriculture
- Farm-to-home processes

Instead of reading about farming, visitors experienced it firsthand.

Harvest Experience

One of the most engaging activities was allowing customers to harvest vegetables themselves. This hands-on experience helped families appreciate the effort behind every delivery while creating a stronger emotional connection with the food they consumed.

Wellness & Food Sessions

Visitors participated in conversations around:

- Healthy eating habits
- Seasonal nutrition
- Benefits of organic produce
- Everyday wellness
- Sustainable living

These sessions reinforced Naturally Good's positioning as a wellness brand rather than simply a vegetable delivery company.

Family Activities

To make the experience enjoyable for all age groups, the events also included:

- Games and recreational activities
- Children's engagement zones
- Community interactions
- Live music and entertainment
- Farm-style meals
- Photo opportunities

The objective was to create a memorable day that families would associate with Naturally Good.

Brand Experience

Throughout the event, customers could:

- Explore Naturally Good products
- Interact with the team
- Ask questions about subscriptions
- Learn about weekly deliveries
- Understand the farm-to-home model

The conversations were organic and educational, never sales-driven.

My Role

I managed the entire event strategy from planning to execution.

My responsibilities included:

- Conceptualising the Farm to Family initiative
- Planning event themes and customer journeys
- Coordinating with farm operations and logistics teams
- Managing registrations and guest communication
- Developing event branding and marketing collateral
- Planning activities and engagement zones
- Coordinating food, entertainment, and wellness sessions
- Creating promotional content for digital platforms
- Managing on-ground execution
- Collecting customer feedback and post-event engagement

Experiential Marketing

People remember experiences more than advertisements.

By allowing customers to visit the farm and engage with the brand directly, we created lasting impressions that traditional campaigns couldn't achieve.

Transparency Builds Trust

Inviting customers to see our farming practices firsthand demonstrated confidence in our processes and strengthened credibility.

Community Marketing

The events brought together families, subscribers, prospective customers, and the Naturally Good team, creating a sense of belonging rather than a transactional relationship.

Relationship Marketing

The focus wasn't immediate sales—it was long-term relationships.

By spending meaningful time with customers, we strengthened loyalty and encouraged repeat engagement.

Education-Based Marketing

Instead of promoting products, we educated visitors about farming, nutrition, and healthy living. This positioned Naturally Good as a trusted knowledge partner.

Business Impact

The Farm to Family initiative became one of Naturally Good's strongest brand-building activities.

The events contributed to:

- Stronger customer trust through complete farm transparency
- Increased engagement with existing subscribers
- Higher-quality conversations with prospective customers
- Enhanced community participation and word-of-mouth
- Rich content opportunities for social media and marketing campaigns
- Reinforced Naturally Good's positioning as a premium wellness and farm-to-home brand
- Created memorable customer experiences that strengthened long-term loyalty

More importantly, the initiative transformed customers into brand advocates by allowing them to experience the brand beyond the product itself.

Skills Demonstrated

- Experiential Marketing
- Event Strategy & Planning
- Brand Experience Design
- Community Marketing
- Customer Engagement
- Relationship Marketing
- Project Management
- Cross-Functional Collaboration
- Event Operations
- Content Marketing
- Brand Storytelling
- Consumer Experience Design

Key Takeaway

The most powerful marketing doesn't always happen on a screen—it happens when people experience your brand in real life. Through the Farm to Family initiative, I transformed Naturally Good's farms into immersive brand experiences where customers could see, touch, and understand the journey behind their food. By combining education, transparency, wellness, and community, the events built trust, strengthened customer relationships, and turned everyday subscribers into long-term brand advocates.

Amazon A+ Strategy

Launching Naturally Good on Amazon

Building a Marketplace Presence That Increased Discoverability, Trust & Product Visibility

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Project: Amazon Marketplace Launch & Listing Optimization

Objective: Successfully launch Naturally Good's premium product range on Amazon by creating high-quality product listings, optimizing discoverability, and building a strong marketplace presence that reflected the brand's premium identity.

The Challenge

Naturally Good was already known for its farm-to-home subscription model, but expanding to Amazon meant entering one of India's most competitive marketplaces.

Unlike a brand website, where customers are already familiar with the company, Amazon places your products alongside hundreds of competitors. Customers compare products in seconds, making decisions based on titles, images, pricing, reviews, and perceived trust.

The challenge was to ensure Naturally Good stood out while maintaining its premium positioning and communicating the brand's values effectively.

The Insight

Winning on Amazon isn't just about having a good product—it's about making the product easy to discover and compelling to choose.

Customers often make purchase decisions before reading the full description. That meant every part of the listing had to work together to answer key questions quickly:

- What is the product?

- Why is it better?
- Why should I trust this brand?
- Why is it worth the price?

The focus was on building trust before driving conversions.

The Strategy

I developed a marketplace strategy that combined content optimization, visual storytelling, SEO, and brand consistency.

Instead of uploading basic product information, every listing was treated as a digital storefront designed to educate customers, communicate value, and improve visibility in Amazon search results.

My Role

I managed the complete listing process from planning to execution.

My responsibilities included:

- Researching competitor listings and marketplace trends
- Identifying relevant customer search terms
- Creating SEO-optimized product titles
- Writing compelling bullet points focused on customer benefits
- Developing detailed product descriptions
- Creating Amazon A+ Content with premium storytelling and visuals
- Coordinating product photography and lifestyle images
- Organizing product attributes and backend information
- Ensuring compliance with Amazon listing guidelines
- Working with the design team to maintain a consistent premium brand identity
- Continuously reviewing listings for improvements based on customer feedback and marketplace performance

Building High-Converting Listings

Every listing was structured to guide customers from discovery to purchase.

SEO-Optimized Product Titles

I created clear, keyword-rich titles that balanced search visibility with readability, helping products appear in relevant searches while remaining easy to understand.

Benefit-Driven Bullet Points

Instead of simply listing features, the bullet points focused on what customers would gain.

They highlighted aspects such as:

- Premium quality
- Natural sourcing
- Everyday wellness
- Purity
- Usage convenience
- Packaging innovations
- Trust and transparency

Product Descriptions

The descriptions combined storytelling with practical information, explaining not just what the product was, but why it aligned with Naturally Good's philosophy of clean, honest, and sustainable food.

Amazon A+ Content

To create a premium shopping experience, I developed A+ Content that showcased:

- The Naturally Good brand story
- Product benefits

- Ingredient sourcing
 - Lifestyle imagery
 - Usage suggestions
 - Comparison sections across the product range
- The objective was to increase customer confidence while strengthening brand recall.

Visual Strategy

Recognizing that images are often the first thing customers notice, I worked on a structured visual approach that included:

- Clean white-background product images
 - Lifestyle photography
 - Infographics highlighting benefits
 - Packaging close-ups
 - Ingredient-focused visuals
 - Educational graphics explaining product usage
- This created a richer and more engaging shopping experience.

Marketplace Optimization

Launching the products was only the first step.

I also focused on improving long-term visibility by:

- Regularly reviewing listing quality
 - Refining keywords and search relevance
 - Updating creatives for seasonal campaigns
 - Optimizing product content as new insights emerged
 - Maintaining consistent branding across Amazon and other digital channels
- The objective was to continuously strengthen discoverability and customer engagement.

Marketing Principles Applied

Marketplace SEO

Optimizing titles, keywords, and product content helped improve discoverability within Amazon's search ecosystem and ensured products reached relevant audiences.

Conversion Copywriting

Every section of the listing—from the title to the A+ Content—was written to answer customer questions, reduce hesitation, and encourage informed purchasing decisions.

Visual Merchandising

High-quality imagery and infographics enhanced the shopping experience by communicating product benefits quickly and reinforcing Naturally Good's premium positioning.

Brand Consistency

The marketplace experience reflected the same tone, messaging, and visual identity used across Naturally Good's website, packaging, and digital campaigns, creating a cohesive customer journey.

Customer-Centric Communication

Rather than overwhelming customers with technical details, the content focused on clarity, transparency, and practical value, making it easier for shoppers to understand and trust the products.

Business Impact

The Amazon launch established Naturally Good's presence on one of India's largest online marketplaces while creating a scalable framework for future product launches.

The initiative contributed to:

- A professional and premium marketplace presence
- Improved product discoverability through optimized listings
- Stronger customer trust through high-quality content and visuals
- Consistent branding across digital sales channels
- Enhanced shopping experience through Amazon A+ Content
- A repeatable listing process for expanding the product portfolio

Skills Demonstrated

- Amazon Marketplace Strategy
- Marketplace SEO
- Product Listing Optimization
- Amazon A+ Content
- E-commerce Content Strategy
- Conversion Copywriting
- Product Positioning
- Visual Merchandising
- Consumer Psychology
- Brand Storytelling
- Digital Commerce
- Cross-Functional Collaboration

Key Takeaway

Launching a product on Amazon is about more than uploading images and descriptions—it's about building trust in a marketplace where customers make decisions within seconds. By leading Naturally Good's Amazon listing strategy, I created optimized, premium product pages that combined SEO, compelling storytelling, strong visuals, and Amazon A+ Content. This approach helped improve discoverability, strengthen brand credibility, and establish a scalable foundation for Naturally Good's growth in e-commerce.

Growth Dashboard

Turning Marketing Data into Business Decisions Building Growth Dashboards to Track Performance, Identify Opportunities & Improve Marketing ROI

Overview

Brands: Naturally Good Organic Farms, HIOC Café & QSR, Cupeese Premium Cheesecakes

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Project: Marketing & Growth Dashboard Development

Objective:

Create centralized dashboards that transformed marketing and business data into actionable insights, enabling faster decision-making across campaigns, sales, customer acquisition, and retention.

The Challenge

Marketing activities were spread across multiple channels—Meta Ads, Google Ads, website traffic, WhatsApp campaigns, offline activations, Amazon, social media, and sales teams. While each platform provided its own reports, there wasn't a single place to understand the complete customer journey or answer simple business questions like:

- Which campaign generated the best leads?
- Which marketing channel delivered the highest ROI?
- Where were customers dropping off?
- Which creatives performed best?
- Which products generated the highest revenue?
- How were subscriptions growing month-over-month?

Without a unified reporting system, decision-making relied on assumptions instead of data.

The Insight

Good marketing doesn't end when a campaign goes live.

The real value comes from understanding what worked, why it worked, and how those insights can improve the next campaign.

I wanted reporting to become a decision-making tool rather than just a collection of numbers.

The Strategy

I developed structured growth dashboards that consolidated marketing, sales, and customer performance into a single view.

Instead of tracking isolated metrics, the dashboards focused on the complete growth funnel—from awareness to acquisition, conversion, retention, and revenue.

This allowed leadership teams to quickly identify trends, opportunities, and areas requiring immediate attention.

My Role

I designed the dashboard framework and determined which metrics mattered most for each business objective.

My responsibilities included:

- Identifying key business KPIs
- Structuring dashboard layouts
- Consolidating data from multiple sources
- Defining marketing and sales metrics
- Tracking campaign performance
- Monitoring customer acquisition and retention
- Creating executive-level reports
- Presenting insights for strategic decision-making
- Reviewing trends and recommending optimizations

Dashboard Framework

Marketing Performance Dashboard

This dashboard tracked the effectiveness of paid and organic marketing activities.

Metrics included:

- Campaign performance
- Reach & impressions
- Click-through rate (CTR)
- Cost Per Click (CPC)
- Cost Per Lead (CPL)
- Conversion Rate
- Creative performance
- Audience performance
- Return on Ad Spend (ROAS)
- Budget utilization

This enabled quicker identification of high-performing campaigns and opportunities for optimization.

Customer Acquisition Dashboard

To understand how customers moved through the marketing funnel, I tracked:

- Website visitors
- Landing page conversions
- Qualified leads
- Trial sign-ups
- Subscription conversions
- New customer acquisition
- Customer acquisition cost (CAC)
- Lead source analysis

This provided visibility into which channels were generating the most valuable customers.

Subscription & Retention Dashboard (Naturally Good)

Since Naturally Good operates on a subscription model, retention was just as important as acquisition.

Key metrics included:

- Active subscribers
- Monthly subscription growth
- Renewals
- Repeat orders
- Churn rate
- Customer Lifetime Value (CLV)
- Referral performance
- Customer engagement trends

These insights helped evaluate long-term customer relationships rather than just one-time purchases.

Sales Dashboard

I monitored commercial performance through metrics such as:

- Revenue by product category
- Best-selling products
- Daily, weekly, and monthly sales
- Sales by channel
- Average Order Value (AOV)
- Seasonal performance
- Festival campaign sales
- Marketplace performance

This connected marketing efforts directly to business outcomes.

Creative Performance Dashboard

Since creative quality significantly influences campaign performance, I tracked:

- Best-performing ad creatives
- Video vs static performance
- Carousel engagement
- Hook effectiveness
- Creative fatigue
- Engagement Rate
- Cost by creative
- Conversion by creative type

These insights informed future creative strategy and A/B testing.

Tools & Platforms

Depending on the campaign and reporting needs, I worked with data from:

- Meta Ads Manager
- Google Analytics
- Shopify
- Amazon Seller Central
- CRM platforms
- Excel & Google Sheets
- Internal sales reports
- Social media analytics

The focus was on bringing these data points together into dashboards that were easy for both marketing and leadership teams to understand.

Marketing Principles Applied

Data-Driven Decision Making

Marketing decisions were based on measurable insights rather than assumptions, enabling more effective budget allocation and campaign optimization.

Full-Funnel Analytics

Instead of evaluating campaigns solely on impressions or clicks, the dashboards measured performance across the entire customer journey—from awareness to retention.

Performance Optimization

Continuous monitoring allowed underperforming campaigns to be identified early and optimized before significant budget was spent.

Executive Reporting

Dashboards translated complex marketing data into clear business insights, helping stakeholders quickly understand performance and make informed decisions.

Continuous Improvement

By reviewing trends over time, the dashboards supported a culture of testing, learning, and ongoing optimization across campaigns and channels.

Business Impact

The growth dashboards became an essential tool for monitoring marketing effectiveness and business performance.

The initiative contributed to:

- Improved visibility into marketing and sales performance
- Faster identification of high-performing campaigns
- Better alignment between marketing spend and business outcomes
- More informed budget allocation
- Enhanced collaboration between marketing, sales, and leadership teams
- Stronger reporting for campaign reviews and strategic planning
- A scalable framework that could be adapted across multiple brands and growth initiatives

Skills Demonstrated

- Growth Analytics
- Marketing Dashboard Design
- KPI Development
- Performance Marketing Analysis
- Data Visualization
- Funnel Analysis
- Marketing Attribution
- Customer Lifecycle Analytics

- E-commerce Reporting
- Business Intelligence
- Excel & Google Sheets
- Strategic Decision-Making

Key Takeaway

Marketing generates value only when it informs better decisions. By building growth dashboards across Naturally Good, HIOC, and Cupeese, I transformed fragmented data into actionable insights that connected marketing activities with real business outcomes. These dashboards enabled faster decision-making, improved campaign optimization, and created a data-driven approach to sustainable growth across three distinct brands.

Superfoods packaging

From Shelf Concept to Market Launch

Developing the Packaging & Go-to-Market Strategy for Naturally Good's Superfoods Range

Overview

Brand: Naturally Good Organic Farms

Role: Brand Marketing & Growth Manager

Project: Superfoods Packaging Design & Product Launch

Products Included:

- Moringa Powder
- Chia Seeds
- Flax Seeds
- Pumpkin Seeds
- Sunflower Seeds
- Black Tea
- Brown Sugar
- Rock Salt
- Makhana
- Peanuts
- Other Naturally Pure pantry essentials

Objective:

Create a premium, scalable packaging system and execute a successful product launch that positioned Naturally Good as a wellness brand beyond fresh vegetables.

The Challenge

Naturally Good was already recognised for its farm-to-home organic vegetable subscription. However, expanding into the superfoods category meant entering a highly competitive market filled with established wellness brands.

The challenge was twofold:

- Build packaging that instantly reflected Naturally Good's premium and trustworthy identity.
- Launch an entirely new product category while ensuring customers understood how these products complemented their existing healthy lifestyle.

The goal wasn't just to sell superfoods—it was to expand Naturally Good into a complete wellness ecosystem.

The Insight

Customers already trusted Naturally Good for fresh produce.

The opportunity was to extend that trust into everyday pantry essentials.

Rather than launching products individually, I positioned the range as a natural extension of the customer's wellness journey.

The packaging needed to communicate:

- Premium quality
- Clean ingredients
- Everyday nutrition
- Simplicity
- Brand consistency

Every product had to feel like it belonged to one cohesive family.

The Strategy

I developed both the packaging strategy and the go-to-market plan.

The objective was to ensure consistency across every customer touchpoint—from packaging to product photography, Amazon listings, website content, social media, and launch campaigns.

Instead of creating different visual identities for each SKU, I built a packaging system that could easily scale as new products were added to the Naturally Pure range.

My Role

I managed the project from concept to launch.

My responsibilities included:

- Planning the product launch strategy
- Researching competitors and category trends
- Developing the packaging concept
- Creating product naming conventions
- Writing all packaging copy
- Developing front and back label content
- Crafting product descriptions and benefit messaging
- Coordinating with designers for artwork development
- Reviewing print-ready files
- Ensuring packaging compliance and mandatory declarations
- Planning launch creatives
- Coordinating product photography
- Creating website content
- Developing Amazon listings and A+ Content
- Planning Meta campaign creatives
- Supporting influencer outreach and social media promotions

Packaging Strategy

Every package followed a consistent premium design language.

Front of Pack

Designed to communicate key information within seconds.

Included:

- Naturally Good branding
- Product name
- Clean and minimal layout
- Key nutritional highlights
- Premium visual hierarchy
- Net quantity

The objective was to create strong shelf appeal while maintaining a modern and trustworthy look.

Back of Pack

Content included:

- Product overview
- Nutritional benefits
- Usage suggestions

- Storage instructions
- Brand story
- Manufacturing details
- Batch information
- FSSAI compliance
- Customer support information

Rather than overwhelming customers with technical language, the copy was designed to be simple, informative, and easy to understand.

Creating a Unified Product Family

One of the biggest priorities was ensuring that every SKU looked like part of the Naturally Good ecosystem.

To achieve this, I maintained consistency across:

- Typography
- Colour palette
- Layout structure
- Iconography
- Information hierarchy
- Brand messaging

This made the range instantly recognisable while allowing each product to retain its own identity.

Launch Strategy

The product launch extended beyond packaging.

I developed an integrated launch plan across multiple channels.

Digital Launch

- Website updates
- Product landing pages
- Amazon listings
- Amazon A+ Content
- Meta advertising
- Social media teasers
- Educational content
- Wellness-focused campaigns
- Email and WhatsApp communication

Content Marketing

Instead of promoting products alone, I created educational campaigns around:

- Daily nutrition
- Superfood benefits
- Healthy recipes
- Wellness routines
- Ingredient awareness
- Lifestyle content

This positioned Naturally Good as a wellness educator rather than just a product seller.

Visual Marketing

The launch included:

- Premium product photography
- Lifestyle imagery
- Flat-lay compositions
- Packaging close-ups
- Benefit infographics
- Reels
- Recipe videos
- Product showcase creatives

The visuals were designed to support consistency across every platform.

Brand Extension Strategy

Rather than introducing unrelated products, the superfoods range naturally extended Naturally Good's promise of healthier living, making it easier for existing customers to adopt the new category.

Packaging as a Brand Asset

The packaging was designed to communicate quality, trust, and wellness while creating a consistent identity that could grow with future product launches.

Educational Marketing

Superfoods often require customer education.

Instead of relying on promotional messaging, the launch focused on explaining nutritional benefits, usage, and how each product fit into everyday lifestyles.

Omnichannel Launch

Customers experienced the same messaging and visual identity across the website, Amazon, social media, packaging, and advertising, creating a seamless brand experience.

Premium Positioning

Every element—from typography to photography—was carefully curated to reinforce Naturally Good's premium image and justify its value proposition.

Business Impact

The superfoods launch helped Naturally Good expand beyond vegetables and establish a broader presence in the health and wellness category.

The project contributed to:

- A cohesive premium packaging system across multiple products
- Stronger brand recognition through consistent visual identity
- Successful introduction of the Naturally Pure product range
- Enhanced visibility across the website, Amazon, and social media
- Improved customer understanding through educational content
- A scalable framework for future product launches and category expansion

Skills Demonstrated

- Product Launch Strategy
- Packaging Development
- Brand Extension
- Product Positioning
- Go-to-Market Planning
- Packaging Copywriting
- Creative Direction
- E-commerce Marketing
- Marketplace Strategy
- Brand Storytelling
- Content Marketing
- Cross-Functional Project Management

Key Takeaway

Launching a new product range is about creating an ecosystem, not just introducing new SKUs. By leading the packaging and go-to-market strategy for Naturally Good's Superfoods range, I developed a premium, scalable identity that connected seamlessly with the brand's existing values. From packaging and product storytelling to Amazon listings, website content, and launch campaigns, I helped position Naturally Good as a holistic wellness brand, expanding its presence beyond fresh vegetables into everyday nutrition.

Cupeese

Reimagining a Dessert Category

From Idea to Identity: Creating Cupeese's Packaging & the "Cheesecake in a Cup" Concept

Overview

Brand: Cupeese (Premium Cheesecake Brand, Agra)

Role: Brand Marketing & Strategy

Project: Brand Packaging Development & Product Concept Innovation

Objective:

Develop a unique product identity by introducing the concept of "Cheesecake in a Cup", while creating premium packaging that reflected Cupeese's positioning as a modern, indulgent dessert brand.

The Challenge

The dessert market is crowded with cakes, pastries, and cheesecakes that often look similar. For a new premium dessert brand like Cupeese, simply offering great cheesecake wasn't enough. The brand needed something customers would instantly remember.

The challenge was to create a product that was:

- Easy to carry
- Easy to eat
- Instagram-worthy
- Premium
- Convenient for gifting and delivery
- Different from traditional cheesecake presentations

Alongside the product concept, the packaging had to communicate the same premium experience while protecting the product during transport.

The Insight

Consumer behaviour has shifted towards convenience without compromising quality.

People increasingly enjoy desserts:

- On the go
- At cafés
- During work breaks
- As gifts
- Through food delivery platforms

Traditional cheesecake slices often require plates, cutlery, and careful handling.

I identified an opportunity to simplify the experience by transforming cheesecake into an individual, portable dessert while maintaining its premium appeal.

This became the foundation of Cheesecake in a Cup.

The Idea

Instead of serving cheesecake as a conventional slice, I helped shape the idea of presenting it in a premium cup format.

The concept focused on:

- Individual servings
- Layered presentation
- Easy portability
- Minimal mess
- Better delivery experience
- Premium visual appeal
- Social media friendliness

The cup itself became part of the product experience rather than just its packaging.

Packaging Strategy

Once the product concept was established, I developed a packaging system that reinforced Cupeese's premium positioning.

The packaging was designed to feel elegant from the moment customers received it.

Cup Design

The transparent cup showcased the beautiful layers of cheesecake, allowing the product to become the hero.

Instead of hiding the dessert, the packaging highlighted:

- Creamy textures
- Layering
- Toppings
- Fresh ingredients
- Premium craftsmanship

Outer Packaging

The outer packaging was designed with a clean and modern aesthetic that reflected Cupeese's premium identity.

Key considerations included:

- Minimal branding
- Premium colour palette
- Easy handling
- Delivery-friendly structure
- Gift-ready presentation
- Strong brand recall

Brand Communication

Rather than filling the packaging with excessive text, I focused on concise messaging that reflected the brand's personality.

The communication highlighted:

- Freshly prepared desserts
- Premium ingredients
- Handcrafted quality
- Celebration moments
- Everyday indulgence

Customer Experience

Every packaging decision was made with the customer journey in mind.

The experience began before the first bite.

Customers could:

- Instantly recognize the product
- Carry it easily
- Enjoy it without additional plates
- Share it conveniently
- Photograph it for social media
- Reuse or dispose of the packaging with ease

This transformed the dessert into an experience rather than simply a product.

My Role

I led the product and packaging ideation from concept to execution.

My responsibilities included:

- Identifying market opportunities
- Developing the "Cheesecake in a Cup" concept
- Planning the customer experience
- Creating the packaging strategy
- Developing brand messaging
- Writing packaging copy
- Coordinating with designers
- Reviewing packaging prototypes
- Ensuring practicality for takeaway and delivery
- Supporting product photography and launch creatives

Marketing Principles Applied

Product Innovation

Rather than competing with existing cheesecake brands, the concept created a distinctive format that offered greater convenience while maintaining premium quality.

Design Thinking

The product was designed around customer behaviour, focusing on portability, ease of use, and visual appeal rather than following traditional dessert presentation.

Experience-Led Branding

The packaging wasn't simply a container—it became an extension of the product, enhancing the customer's overall experience.

Premium Positioning

Clean aesthetics, thoughtful presentation, and premium materials reinforced Cupeese's identity as a high-quality dessert brand.

Social Media Marketing

The layered presentation and attractive packaging naturally encouraged customers to photograph and share their desserts, increasing organic brand visibility.

Business Impact

The product concept and packaging helped Cupeese establish a unique identity within Agra's premium dessert market.

The initiative contributed to:

- A differentiated product format through the "Cheesecake in a Cup" concept
- Stronger premium brand perception
- Enhanced customer convenience for takeaway and delivery
- Improved presentation suitable for gifting and celebrations
- Increased shareability through visually appealing packaging
- A scalable packaging system that could accommodate multiple flavours and future product launches

Skills Demonstrated

- Product Innovation
- Brand Strategy
- Packaging Design

- Consumer Insight
- Design Thinking
- Product Positioning
- Customer Experience Design
- Brand Storytelling
- Packaging Copywriting
- Creative Direction
- Go-to-Market Strategy
- Cross-Functional Collaboration

Key Takeaway

Innovation doesn't always require inventing a new product—it can come from reimagining how customers experience it. By helping shape the "Cheesecake in a Cup" concept and leading Cupeese's packaging strategy, I transformed a traditional dessert into a modern, portable, and premium experience. The combination of customer-centric design, elegant packaging, and strong brand storytelling helped create a distinctive identity that made Cupeese memorable in a competitive dessert market.

HIOC CAFE REVAMP

Rebranding the Café Experience

How I Revamped HIOC into a Cozy, Experience-Driven Café That Customers Wanted to Visit Again

Overview

Brand: HIOC Café & QSR (Agra)
Role: Brand Marketing & Strategy
Project: Café Revamp & Customer Experience Transformation
Objective:

Transform HIOC from a functional café into a destination where customers came not just for the food, but for the overall experience. By combining branding, visual merchandising, customer psychology, and experiential marketing, I redesigned the café environment to increase customer engagement, encourage repeat visits, and strengthen HIOC's brand identity.

The Challenge

When customers choose a café today, they're not only evaluating the menu—they're evaluating the entire experience.

The existing HIOC space served good food, but the ambience didn't fully reflect the premium, healthy, and welcoming identity the brand wanted to communicate. The challenge was to create an environment where customers felt comfortable spending time, meeting friends, working remotely, or celebrating special moments. The café needed to become a place people wanted to photograph, recommend, and revisit.

The Insight

People remember how a place makes them feel.

A café's ambience influences:

- How long customers stay
- Whether they return
- How much they spend
- Whether they recommend it to others
- Whether they share it on social media

I realised that improving the customer experience didn't always require structural renovations. Thoughtful branding, visual storytelling, and better use of space could significantly change customer perception.

The Strategy

Instead of making isolated design changes, I approached the project as a complete brand experience transformation.

Every customer touchpoint—from the entrance to the dining area—was evaluated through the lens of customer psychology.

The objective was to create an atmosphere that felt:

- Warm
- Premium
- Comfortable
- Instagram-worthy
- Consistent with HIOC's healthy café positioning

My Role

I led the revamp by combining marketing strategy with customer experience design.

My responsibilities included:

- Auditing the existing customer journey
- Identifying areas for visual and experiential improvement
- Developing the café's refreshed brand direction
- Planning the ambience and customer flow
- Coordinating décor and branding elements
- Designing in-store marketing materials
- Curating wall graphics and visual storytelling
- Improving menu presentation and point-of-sale communication
- Enhancing product displays
- Coordinating with vendors and execution teams
- Ensuring every design decision aligned with the brand identity

Key Improvements

Creating a Cozy Ambience

The café environment was redesigned to encourage customers to spend more time in the space.

The focus was on creating a warm and welcoming atmosphere through:

- Thoughtfully arranged seating
- Comfortable customer flow
- Soft visual aesthetics
- Clean and organised spaces
- Natural and inviting décor
- Balanced lighting
- Branded elements that reinforced the café's personality

The result was a space that felt relaxed yet premium.

Strengthening Brand Identity

Every visual element was aligned with HIOC's positioning as a modern, health-focused café. This included:

- Updated in-store branding
- Consistent colour palette
- Lifestyle-focused visuals
- Wall messaging
- Menu design enhancements
- Branded touchpoints throughout the café

Customers experienced the same brand personality across the physical space and digital platforms.

Visual Merchandising

Products were displayed more intentionally to improve visibility and encourage impulse purchases.

I worked on:

- Counter displays
- Product placement
- Menu visibility
- Promotional communication
- Seasonal displays
- Featured product highlights

The objective was to make ordering simpler while increasing exposure to high-margin offerings.

Customer Experience

The revamp focused on making every visit enjoyable.

Key improvements included:

- Easier navigation within the café
- More inviting seating areas
- Better presentation of food and beverages
- Cleaner visual communication
- Spaces that encouraged conversations and longer stays

These changes helped create a more memorable dining experience.

Social Media-Friendly Spaces

Recognising the importance of user-generated content, I introduced design elements that naturally encouraged customers to take photographs.

Well-designed corners, attractive food presentation, and cohesive branding made the café more shareable on platforms like Instagram.

This helped generate organic visibility without relying solely on paid promotions.

Marketing Principles Applied

Experiential Marketing

Customers remember experiences more than advertisements.

The café itself became a marketing asset, creating positive memories every time someone visited.

Environmental Branding

The physical environment reflected HIOC's brand values, reinforcing its positioning through design, décor, and visual communication.

Customer Journey Mapping

Every stage of the visit—from entering the café to placing an order and enjoying the meal—was designed to feel intuitive, comfortable, and enjoyable.

Sensory Marketing

The combination of ambience, food presentation, lighting, music, and visual elements created a holistic dining experience that appealed to multiple senses.

Community Building

By creating a welcoming and comfortable environment, HIOC became more than a place to eat—it became a space where people gathered, worked, celebrated, and spent quality time.

Business Impact

The café transformation strengthened HIOC's overall brand perception by aligning the physical environment with its marketing strategy.

The initiative contributed to:

- A stronger premium brand identity
- Improved customer experience
- Increased customer engagement within the café
- Greater potential for repeat visits
- Enhanced social media visibility through user-generated content
- Better presentation of products and promotions
- A consistent brand experience across online and offline touchpoints

Most importantly, the revamp repositioned HIOC as a destination where customers could enjoy both great food and a memorable atmosphere.

Skills Demonstrated

- Brand Experience Strategy
- Customer Experience (CX) Design
- Café Branding
- Visual Merchandising
- Environmental Branding
- Experiential Marketing
- Retail Marketing
- Consumer Psychology
- In-Store Marketing
- Creative Direction
- Project Management
- Vendor Coordination
- Cross-Functional Collaboration

Key Takeaway

A café's greatest competitive advantage isn't just its menu—it's the experience it creates. By leading HIOC's brand and ambience revamp, I transformed the café into a warm, inviting, and experience-driven destination that reflected the brand's personality. Through thoughtful design, visual merchandising, customer journey mapping, and experiential marketing, I helped create a space where customers wanted to stay longer, return more often, and share their experience with others.
